Papers Served Just Before Bellport Murder and Suicide, but Action Was "to Be Settled."

The whole sordid story of the experiment in marital exchanges which underlay the murder of Mrs. Henry C. Edey by her husband and his suicide in their home at Bellport, L. I., on Thursday, was told to-day by Mrs. Nellie Murdock in the inquest held by Coroner Moore in the little village hall at Bellport.

Self consciously-almost jauntily-this petite and pretty young woman of about twenty-four, told how Henry C. Edey had, in cool deliberation, arranged that he and Gardner Murdock, her husband, should exchange wives. Because Edey "did not fulfill his promises" the scheme fell through. That was the reason why Mrs. Murdock was perfectly willing to assist her husband in bringing a $100,000 suit for alieration of affections against the wealthy retired broker. The services of the papers in that suit had preceded by only a brief time the double tragedy in the home of the Edeys.
